DEVELOPER'S WORKSHOP

Global Justice XML Data Model

March 1-3, 2005   Arlington, Virginia

REGISTER NOW!

ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

The U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Justice Programs (OJP), Global Training and Technical Assistance Committee and the Integrated Justice Information Systems Institute are pleased to offer a public training workshop on the Global Justice XML Data Model (Global JXDM), Version 3.0. Approximately 16,000 justice and public safety-related data elements were collected from 30 unique local and state governmental sources to develop the Global JXDM. These elements were analyzed and integrated to produce approximately 2,750 reusable components (550 types and 2,200 properties).

BENEFITS

These components have inherent qualities enabling access from multiple sources and reuse in multiple applications. In addition, the standardization of the core components results in significant potential for increased interoperability among justice and public safety information systems. Workshop attendees will benefit from networking with over 200 peers, and the hands-on training will enable more efficient implementation.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This workshop is specifically designed for developers and practitioners in the field to provide the information needed to enable them to build applications using the Global JXDM, Version 3.0, and to enable them to use it effectively. Prior XML experience is required.

WORKSHOP CURRICULUM

This workshop will be a highly technical session that will feature hands-on exercises and experienced presenters. Topics covered during this workshop include fundamentals of the Global JXDM, external enumerations, constraints, extension and substitution, relationships, subschema generator tools, and best practices.

CLASS SCHEDULE

The course is designed for 15 hours of training, presented over three days. A detailed agenda will be provided in February 2005. The following training schedule was created to provide the greatest opportunities for same-day travel:
